Eleventh session
Geneva, 2–13 May 2011

Compilation prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1

Sierra Leone

The present report is a compilation of the information contained in the reports of treaty bodies, special procedures, including observations and comments by the State concerned, and other relevant official United Nations documents. It does not contain any opinions, views or suggestions on the part of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), other than those contained in public reports issued by OHCHR. It follows the structure of the general guidelines adopted by the Human Rights Council. Information included herein has been systematically referenced in endnotes. The report has been prepared taking into consideration the four-year periodicity of the first cycle of the review. In the absence of recent information, the latest available reports and documents have been taken into consideration, unless they are outdated. Since this report only compiles information contained in official United Nations documents, lack of information or focus on specific issues may be due to non-ratification of a treaty and/or to a low level of interaction or cooperation with international human rights mechanisms.

B. Constitutional and legislative framework

2. In the 2010 United Nations Country Team (UNCT) submission it was reported that the Government had established a Commission in October 2006 to review the Constitution of 1991, a key recommendation of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) report. In 2007, the Constitutional Review Commission had submitted recommendations to the President of Sierra Leone and a Committee was established to review them and advise on the way forward. UNCT noted that the Committee's work had been rather slow and indicated that the Government had precluded that a referendum on the constitutional review would take place before the 2012 elections.<sup>12</sup>

3. In 2007, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) expressed concern about section 27 (4) (d) of the Constitution, which provided that the guarantee against non-discrimination did not apply with respect to adoption, marriage, divorce, burial, devolution of property on death or other interests of personal law, thus discriminating against women, in violation of the Convention.<sup>13</sup> UNCT emphasized that section 27 of the Constitution compromised the full implementation of the three gender Acts passed in 2007, including in areas of property, adoption, marriage and divorce.<sup>14</sup> CEDAW urged Sierra Leone to take all appropriate measures, without delay, to repeal section 27 (4) (d) of the Constitution.<sup>15</sup>

4. UNCT observed that some legislative provisions were shrouded by discrimination and inequality. The Constitution prohibited the acquisition of citizenship through wives. The Constitution also provided that only persons who were of Negro descent could qualify for Sierra Leonean citizenship by birth or naturalization.<sup>16</sup> The common country assessment (CCA) for Sierra Leone (2008-2010) underscored that customary law also discriminated against women. Although unwritten, it applied to the majority of the population and regarded women as "chattels" to be inherited.<sup>17</sup> The Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) urged Sierra Leone to continue and strengthen its efforts to remove all discriminatory laws from its statute books.<sup>18</sup>

5. In 2010, CRC recommended the explicit prohibition by law and criminalization of the use of children in hostilities by the armed forces and the recruitment and use of children in hostilities by non-State armed groups.<sup>19</sup>

C. Institutional and human rights infrastructure

6. As of December 2010, Sierra Leone does not have a national human rights institution accredited by the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (ICC).<sup>20</sup>

7. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights stated in 2010 that the Human Rights Commission of Sierra Leone faced a serious funding shortfall when the project under the Peacebuilding Fund ended in March 2009.<sup>21</sup> Sierra Leone was strongly urged to provide the Human Rights Commission with adequate resources to allow it to carry out its core statutory functions, and to implement the recommendations made by the Commission in its State of Human Rights reports of 2007 and 2008.<sup>22</sup>

8. In 2010, CRC expressed its concern that the National Commission for Children envisaged under the Child Rights Act was yet to be established<sup>23</sup> and recommended that expeditious measures be taken to establish it and bring it into operation, in accordance with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (Paris Principles).<sup>24</sup>

9. UNCT recommended that the Government ensure support to and enhance the capacity of the parliamentary Human Rights Committee, whose role has been key in the enactment of human rights-related bills.<sup>25</sup>

D. Policy measures

10. UNCT reported that discussions were under way to develop a national human rights plan of action, although the process seemed to have been delayed.<sup>26</sup>

11. In 2010, the High Commissioner stated that the absence of a clear land policy had resulted in disputes over ownership of lands. The causes of such disputes included the lack of appropriate demarcation, proper registration and record-keeping.<sup>27</sup> Sierra Leone was strongly urged to adopt a clear land policy, including with regard to the demarcation and proper registration of land.<sup>28</sup>

12. In 2008, CRC encouraged Sierra Leone to adopt a national plan of action on children that addressed fully all of the rights enshrined in the Convention.<sup>29</sup>

II. Promotion and protection of human rights on the ground

OP-CRC-SC	2008	September 2010		To be included in joint combined third to fifth reports due in 2012
CRPD				Initial report due in 2012

13. In 2001, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) noted with regret that no report had been submitted to the Committee since 1974.<sup>31</sup> UNCT observed that 25 reports to United Nations human rights treaty bodies were overdue and noted a dire need for the Human Rights Secretariat of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to receive adequate support and develop a structured and framed scheme for the timely and effective completion of the reporting obligations of Sierra Leone.<sup>32</sup>

2. Cooperation with special procedures

During the period under review, three communications were sent. The Government replied to none of the communications.

Responses to questionnaires on thematic issues

Sierra Leone responded to none of the 26 questionnaires sent by special procedures mandate holders.<sup>34</sup>

3. Cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

14. OHCHR has supported the Human Rights and Rule of Law Section of the United Nations Integrated Peace Building Office in Sierra Leone (UNIPSIL), which was established in August 2008; OHCHR had also supported the UNIPSIL predecessor, the United Nations Integrated Office in Sierra Leone, which had been established in January 2006.<sup>35</sup> The Security Council's mandate to UNIPSIL included providing assistance to the Government in promoting good governance, the rule of law and human rights.<sup>36</sup> During the period under review, the High Commissioner for Human Rights reported annually to the Human Rights Council.<sup>37</sup>

B. Implementation of international human rights obligations taking into account applicable international humanitarian law

1. Equality and non-discrimination

15. CEDAW urged Sierra Leone to put in place without delay a comprehensive strategy, including clear goals and timetables, to modify or eliminate negative cultural practices and stereotypes that are harmful to and discriminate against women and to promote women's full enjoyment of their human rights. Such a strategy should: be undertaken in collaboration with civil society and women's organizations; include specifically designed educational and awareness-raising programmes targeting women and men at all levels of society, including tribal chiefs; and be aimed at creating an enabling environment for the transformation and change of stereotypes and discriminatory cultural values, attitudes and practices.<sup>38</sup>

16. The High Commissioner reported that early and forced marriages (27 per cent of children marry before their fifteenth birthday), teenage pregnancy, high incidence of sexual exploitation and abuse, and cultural and religious bias towards girls' education were all critical challenges.<sup>39</sup> Women continued to suffer from exclusion and discrimination in various fields. Furthermore, criteria applied for awarding scholarships in Birewa chiefdom in Makeni were discriminatory to girls, as girls were considered eligible only if they passed a virginity test.<sup>40</sup>

17. CEDAW encouraged the establishment of a legislative basis for the use of temporary special measures and urged the elaboration of concrete goals, such as quotas and timetables to accelerate achievement of substantive equality between women and men for each area.<sup>41</sup> UNCT noted that the Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children's Affairs had developed a National Gender Strategic Plan (NGSP) and the National Action Plan on UNSCR 1325 and 1820.<sup>42</sup>

18. In his 2010 report to the Security Council, the Secretary-General urged the Government to address the concerns of national stakeholders regarding the need for equal availability of opportunities to all citizens irrespective of ethnic or political affiliations.<sup>43</sup> In 2010, the ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations requested information in particular on the measures taken to ensure equality in employment and occupation between women and men and among members of the different ethnic groups.<sup>44</sup>

2. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

19. In 2010, UNCT<sup>45</sup> and the High Commissioner reported that the de facto moratorium on the death penalty, put in place 10 years earlier, had been respected. The High Commissioner underlined that the TRC had recommended the removal of the death penalty from the statutes.<sup>46</sup>

20. Also in 2010, the High Commissioner stated that ritual killings continued in various parts of the country and that no effective investigations and successful prosecutions had been undertaken.<sup>47</sup>

21. The High Commissioner reported instances of violations of the right to life by State authorities. She cited, by way of example, the incident at Lungi in September 2009 where 3 people were shot dead and 13 others injured as a result of the use of excessive force by the police, who opened fire on demonstrators attacking a police post.<sup>48</sup> The High Commissioner strongly urged the Government to investigate and prosecute security officials involved in violating human rights, notably in the Lungi incident.<sup>49</sup>

22. The High Commissioner observed that a spate of armed robberies with, in some instances, alleged links between members of the security forces and robbers, posed serious challenges to the right to personal security and property.<sup>50</sup>

23. Concerning human rights defenders, the High Commissioner in 2010 reported that the chairperson of the Human Rights Committee of the Bombali district was allegedly detained for two days by the magistrate in Makeni for criticizing the ruling of the court on a rape case.<sup>51</sup>

24. Despite considerable improvement in prison facilities, the High Commissioner observed that some prisons remained extremely overcrowded.<sup>52</sup>

25. CRC, CEDAW and the High Commissioner continued to express concern about female genital mutilation (FGM)<sup>53</sup> and forceful initiation into secret societies.<sup>54</sup> UNCT reported that an estimated 90 per cent of women in Sierra Leone and the diaspora had gone through the practice, which was perceived as a cultural and traditional right that parents exercised in the interest of their children. UNCT noted that very young girls continued to be circumcised, sometimes in isolation from the initiation rites, with serious health consequences.<sup>55</sup> It recommended that due to the sensitivity of the issue, innovative approaches should be explored, and suggested that engaging traditional leaders as partners in development would be a way forward.<sup>56</sup> CRC urged Sierra Leone, inter alia, to provide practitioners who give up FGM with adequate training and support to find alternative sources of income.<sup>57</sup> The High Commissioner encouraged Sierra Leone, inter alia, to ratify and incorporate into national law the Optional Protocol to the African Charter on the Rights of Women.<sup>58</sup>

26. CEDAW expressed particular concern about the persistence of customary law and cultural practices that considered the physical chastisement of family members, in particular women, acceptable.<sup>59</sup> The High Commissioner identified the lack of access of women to the police, the exorbitant fees charged by medical officers and out-of-court settlements as some of the causes of the low prosecution rate of domestic violence under the 2007 Domestic Violence Act.<sup>60</sup> She recommended adoption of a national strategy for the elimination of violence against women.<sup>61</sup>

27. CRC raised concerns about the situation of child victims of sexual and gender-based violence and abuse.<sup>62</sup> The High Commissioner reported that thousands of orphaned and vulnerable children remained victims of exploitation including domestic work, hazardous labour, especially in the mining sector, commercial sex, and trafficking across borders.<sup>63</sup> CRC was also concerned at reports of growing numbers of internally displaced children being trafficked.<sup>64</sup> Other practices noted included parents relinquishing custody of their children to relatives or acquaintances (men kipin), as well as the high number of children living or working in the streets who were particularly vulnerable to sexual and other forms of exploitation.<sup>65</sup>

28. In 2010, the ILO Committee of Experts repeated its observation regarding section 8 (h) of the Chiefdom Councils Act (Cap. 61). It requested the Government to repeal or amend that provision, which was not in conformity with article 9 of the Constitution, under which compulsory cultivation may be imposed on “natives”, and to take necessary measures to bring it into conformity with the Forced Labour Convention (No. 29).<sup>66</sup>

29. CRC was concerned that corporal punishment was not prohibited and, in fact, was widely practiced in homes, schools or alternative care contexts and detention centres.<sup>67</sup> The Committee recommended the full implementation of the Child Rights Act and explicit prohibition by law of all forms of violence against children, including corporal punishment, in all settings, and the effective implementation of those laws.<sup>68</sup>

3. Administration of justice, including impunity and the rule of law

30. In 2010, while noting the strategic reforms carried out by the judiciary with the support of the United Nations Peacebuilding Fund,<sup>69</sup> the High Commissioner underlined that delays in delivering justice, prolonged pretrial detention and cases of detention for periods longer than that stipulated by the law were common.<sup>70</sup> She noted that inadequate prosecutorial capacity contributed to the delay in adjudicating matters in courts,<sup>71</sup> and also observed a lack of vehicles to convey detainees to court.<sup>72</sup> According to UNCT, Sierra Leone had only 14 judges, 15 magistrates and 7 public prosecutors, and an estimated 100 practicing lawyers.<sup>73</sup> The High Commissioner recommended improving the conditions of service of judges and magistrates, to further strengthen the independence of the judiciary and of prosecutors and to fill the vacant positions of magistrates and prosecutors.<sup>74</sup>

31. UNCT indicated that accessibility to the formal system was especially limited in rural areas, where the large majority of the population resorted to local courts, which administered customary law in provincial communities, and to the traditional justice system. At the informal level, paramount chiefs acted as adjudicators of disputes.<sup>75</sup> According to UNCT, the lack of personnel also extended to the 302 local courts operating under the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Local Government rather than the Ministry of Justice. There were currently only three customary law officers charged with reviewing all local court decisions to ensure no errors in law or miscarriage of justice. UNCT noted that the independence of local court chairpersons had been questioned as a lack of tenure security was perceived as affecting decision-making. This situation became even more egregious in the 149 chiefdoms throughout the country where paramount chiefs continued to adjudicate as well.<sup>76</sup> The High Commissioner also reported on serious human rights issues associated with the functioning of local courts. Cases of exorbitant fines, arbitrary detention, the exercise of power beyond one’s jurisdiction and undue influence of traditional authorities on matters under consideration by local courts were rampant.<sup>77</sup> She added that lack of training of the newly appointed chairpersons in local courts posed a serious challenge.<sup>78</sup> UNCT noted that the codification used by local courts as well as their jurisdiction needed to be addressed.<sup>79</sup>

32. UNCT noted that at the level of local courts, customary law was often discriminatory to women.<sup>80</sup> The High Commissioner identified capacity constraints on investigating authorities, the low rate of prosecution, out-of-court settlements and interference by traditional leaders in judicial matters as continuing to undermine the judicial process, thus creating room for impunity, particularly regarding sexual and gender-based violence.<sup>81</sup>

33. In 2002, the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, following her mission to Sierra Leone in 2001, noted that the failure to investigate, prosecute and punish those responsible for rape and other forms of gender-based violence had contributed to an environment of impunity that perpetuated violence against women, including rape and domestic violence.<sup>82</sup>

34. UNCT reported on outstanding challenges in the area of juvenile justice.<sup>83</sup> CRC urged Sierra Leone to ensure that juvenile justice standards were fully implemented, including the Child Rights Act, which raised the age of criminal responsibility to 14 years. CRC also recommended that Sierra Leone adopt a permanent policy of alternative sanctions for juvenile offenders, ensuring that children be held in detention only as a last resort and for as short a time as possible, and that detention sentences be reviewed periodically; that children be held separately from adults both in pretrial detention and after being sentenced; and that cases involving juveniles be brought to trial as quickly as possible.<sup>84</sup>

35. In 2010, CRC recommended that Sierra Leone: take effective measures to monitor the situation of former child combatants who were not included in the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process, particularly girls, with a view to providing them with the assistance necessary to facilitate their full reintegration; and ensure the payment of reparations to former combatants in accordance with the recommendations of the TRC.<sup>85</sup>

36. UNCT reported that many Sierra Leoneans lacked confidence in their police while continuing to fear corruption at their hands due to inadequate oversight mechanisms.<sup>86</sup> It recommended timely completion of the process of setting up an independent police complaints board.<sup>87</sup>

37. UNCT indicated that the Sierra Leone Police had developed an early warning system with provincial and district level security committees to deal with community security issues, and had created the Family Support Unit in order to handle sexual and gender-based crimes. It added that the Transnational Organized Crimes Unit had a human trafficking mandate.<sup>88</sup> The High Commissioner indicated that the Anti-Corruption Commission had been strengthened with prosecutorial powers by legislation passed in August 2008, and no longer depended on the Ministry of Justice to initiate proceedings.<sup>89</sup>

38. The High Commissioner stated that eight prisoners, convicted by the Special Court for Sierra Leone, had been transferred to Rwanda to serve their sentences and noted the serious concerns raised by the Human Rights Commission that transfer of these prisoners to other countries would detach them from their families.<sup>90</sup>

4. Right to privacy, marriage and family life

39. In 2007, CEDAW urged Sierra Leone to accelerate its reform of marriage and family relations in order to eliminate all discriminatory provisions in customary law and the Mohammedan Marriage Act so that women and men could enjoy the same legal rights and obligations.<sup>91</sup>

40. While noting the ongoing nationwide birth registration programme, CRC in 2010 recommended that Sierra Leone ensure that birth registration was free and compulsory in practice; consider the use of mobile birth registration units, particularly for remote areas; and conduct awareness-raising campaigns, with the support of community leaders, to promote birth registration.<sup>92</sup>

41. CRC recommended that Sierra Leone, inter alia, continue its efforts to reunite separated children with their families;<sup>93</sup> and strengthen its efforts to combat illegal adoption, in particular to ensure that the improper inducement of consent for the adoption of a child is duly prosecuted.<sup>94</sup>

5. Freedom of religion or belief, expression, association and peaceful assembly, and right to participate in public and political life

42. In 2010, the High Commissioner referred to reports of religious intolerance, citing incidents of attacks on religious buildings.<sup>95</sup>

43. The High Commissioner observed that although the right to freedom of expression was generally respected, there were instances of violations of that right. The editor of a newspaper was allegedly assaulted by a press photographer associated with the Office of the Presidency, for publishing news and articles criticizing the Government.<sup>96</sup> A reporter was allegedly assaulted and humiliated by women of the Bondo society, a secret society for women, for airing discussions on the negative effects of female genital mutilation.<sup>97</sup>

44. The High Commissioner reported that journalists continued to advocate for the abolition of the seditious libel provisions under the Public Order Act of 1965, and that the writ petition filed by the Sierra Leone Association of Journalists, which challenged the constitutionality of this Act, was quashed by the Supreme Court on 10 November 2009.<sup>98</sup> It was recommended that Sierra Leone repeal the criminal libel provision of the Public Order Act of 1965.<sup>99</sup>

45. In 2010, the ILO Committee of Experts noted that, under section 40 (a) of the Independent Media Commission Act of 2000, any person who operated a media institution without a licence from or registration by the Independent Media Commission was liable on summary conviction to a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years, which may involve compulsory prison labour.<sup>100</sup>

46. In 2010, the High Commissioner reported that violence and intolerance between the supporters of the two main political parties contributed to violations of civil and political rights.<sup>101</sup> The Government appointed a panel to review the report of the high-level commission established to investigate allegations of rape of female political party supporters and to make recommendations for necessary action.<sup>102</sup> UNCT indicated that the relationship between the two major parties remained strained and was expected to intensify.<sup>103</sup> The Secretary-General called on the political parties to continue to engage in dialogue and resolve their differences. He urged the parties to adhere to the code of conduct of the Political Parties Registration Commission and to work closely with the National Electoral Commission on arrangements for the 2012 elections.<sup>104</sup>

47. UNCT observed that while women made up 51 per cent of the population, only 17 of the 124 Parliament members were women. It noted that traditional practices further compounded this situation by discriminating against women from holding traditional paramount chieftaincy positions in the entire Northern Province and Kono district in the east.<sup>105</sup> The High Commissioner reported that, during the 2009 chieftaincy elections, two women were denied the right to run for the position of paramount chief because of traditional and cultural beliefs.<sup>106</sup>

6. Right to work and to just and favourable conditions of work

48. UNCT highlighted that the level of youth unemployment in Sierra Leone was among the highest in the West African subregion.<sup>107</sup> In 2010, the Secretary-General stated that endemic unemployment among young people was a challenge to the stability of the country.<sup>108</sup>

49. In 2010 the ILO Committee of Experts noted that the revision of the labour laws, prepared with ILO technical assistance, had been forwarded to the Law Officers' Department in 1995. The Committee requested the Government once again to make every effort to take the necessary action for the adoption of the new legislation and to indicate progress.<sup>109</sup> The Committee requested the Government to provide detailed information on the collective agreements in force in the education and other sectors.<sup>110</sup>

7. Right to social security and to an adequate standard of living

50. In 2009, the High Commissioner reported that one of the greatest threats to peace consolidation remained the low level of enjoyment of economic and social rights,<sup>111</sup> noting that Sierra Leone still had one of the highest infant and under-five mortality rates and maternal mortality rates in the world.<sup>112</sup>

51. UNCT reported that absolute poverty had fallen from around 70 per cent after the war to around 60 per cent by 2007, and that Sierra Leone was estimated to import nearly 40 per cent of its food needs.<sup>113</sup> CEDAW expressed particular concern about the precarious situation of women in rural areas, who formed the majority of women in Sierra Leone.<sup>114</sup> CRC expressed concern: that efforts to improve food security were not adequate for the survival and development of the child;<sup>115</sup> at the high malnutrition rate, limited access to drinking water and sanitation facilities and inadequate protection of children from malaria;<sup>116</sup> about the gender and regional disparities in access to basic health services; and at the low rates of exclusive breastfeeding.<sup>117</sup>

52. CRC urged Sierra Leone to take measures to prevent and reduce HIV/AIDS infection, particularly with regard to young people, by, inter alia: fully implementing the HIV/AIDS prevention, control and treatment plan; continuing to disseminate information and materials to the public, particularly to women and girls; and increasing knowledge about prevention and protection methods, including safe sex practices.<sup>118</sup>

8. Right to education

53. CRC was concerned that despite increased enrolment and completion rates in primary schools, enrolment was still low, in particular for girls, and that the number of teachers, in view of the large class sizes, was too small. It also expressed concern at the practice of public schools to charge additional fees, and at reports of sexual abuse of children, mostly girls, by teachers and the continued practice of corporal punishment in schools.<sup>119</sup> CEDAW expressed similar concerns.<sup>120</sup>

54. UNCT indicated that the education sector was undergoing a reform, outlined in a recent Government white paper. Reforms included a compulsory early childhood component, extension of the senior secondary school by a year, free and compulsory primary education in both policy and practice, phasing out of the two-shift system, and a review of the conditions of service for teachers, among others. The Education Policy of 2004 was under revision with an aim, inter alia, to improve access to and quality of education, and retention and completion for the girl child.<sup>121</sup>

9. Migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers

55. UNCT reported that Sierra Leone hosted a total of 8,907 refugees and 208 asylum-seekers, mainly from a neighbouring country. In 2009, land agreements were signed between refugees and local authorities. In 2010, plots of land were allocated by the Government and local authorities for construction of shelters to foster integration of refugees in urban areas.<sup>122</sup>

10. Right to development

56. In the Sierra Leone Human Development Report 2007 it was observed that the country remained poor despite its rich resource base.<sup>123</sup> In 2010, the Secretary-General stated that the concluded mining agreements gave hope for self-sufficiency in the coming years. He urged, however, a cautious approach in the implementation of arrangements for the exploitation of resources and indicated that the United Nations stood ready to provide the necessary assistance to Sierra Leone.<sup>124</sup>

57. In 2010 the Peacebuilding Commission took note of the strong emphasis in the second poverty reduction strategy, Agenda for Change, on economic growth and the prioritization of agriculture, energy and the development of road infrastructure.<sup>125</sup> UNCT observed that effective implementation of the Agenda for Change and the health and education strategies depended on the mobilization of resources by the Government, as well as on the support of international partners.<sup>126</sup>

III. Achievements, best practices, challenges and constraints

58. In 2010, the Secretary-General commended Sierra Leone for the establishment of a free health-care programme for nursing mothers, pregnant women and children under the age of 5 to address the high infant and maternal mortality rates.<sup>127</sup>

59. UNCT reported that following the negotiations of the Lomé Peace Agreement (1999) and the end of the war in 2002, huge progress had been made. It noted that the establishment of the TRC and the publication of its final report in 2004 served as a transitional justice mechanism to address impunity, promote national reconciliation and prevent reoccurrence.<sup>128</sup> However, six years after the publication of the TRC report several key recommendations had not yet been implemented.<sup>129</sup>

60. The Secretary-General stated that addressing youth unemployment, reinforcing democratic institutions, combating corruption and promoting national cohesion and unity were among the key challenges that required special attention, particularly ahead of the 2012 elections.<sup>130</sup>

IV. Key national priorities, initiatives and commitments

Specific recommendations for follow-up

61. On 16 July 2001, the HR Committee adopted its Views on communications No. 839/1998 (Mansaraj et al.), No. 840/1998 (Tamba et al.) and No. 841/1998 (Sesay et al.), holding Sierra Leone in violation of ICCPR for having convicted 12 out of the 18 authors of those communications to capital punishment following trials which did not comply with fair trial requirements under the Covenant. In its follow-up response Sierra Leone indicated that six persons had been released and that the right to appeal from courts martial had been reinstated.<sup>131</sup> The Committee considered that Sierra Leone should reconsider its decision not to grant compensation to the families of the deceased victims. Follow-up dialogue is ongoing.<sup>132</sup>

62. UNCT in 2010<sup>133</sup> and the High Commissioner in her annual reports to the Human Rights Council on Sierra Leone made recommendations.<sup>134</sup> They included: speeding up the implementation of the recommendations of the TRC, by, inter alia: fast-tracking the law reform process particularly the sexual offences and matrimonial bills;<sup>135</sup> integrating human right treaties, including CRPD, into national law;<sup>136</sup> setting up the TRC follow-up Committee; completing the Constitutional Review Process, including repealing discriminatory provisions contained therein and abolishing the death penalty;<sup>137</sup> separating the Offices of the Attorney General and that of the Minister of Justice; and decriminalizing libel.<sup>138</sup>

V. Capacity-building and technical assistance

63. In 2007, the High Commissioner reported that Sierra Leone had been selected as one of the first countries to benefit from the newly established United Nations Peacebuilding Commission.<sup>139</sup>

64. UNCT reported that the Sierra Leone Reparations Programme had been established in 2008, following up on one of the key TRC recommendations. Beneficiaries included, inter alia, amputees and victims of sexual violence. The Programme registered over 32,000 war victims and delivered partial benefits to over 20,000 victims. According to UNCT, failure to continue the reparations would entail the risk of fuelling anger, as the victims' fate stood in stark contrast to that of former combatants who received financial assistance and training as part of demobilization and reintegration programmes. The Programme in 2010–2011 remained pivotal to ensure a meaningful and sustainable reconciliation.<sup>140</sup>

65. UNCT<sup>141</sup> and the High Commissioner urged international partners to continue supporting the Government in addressing human rights challenges, in particular to assist in the funding of the reparations programme.<sup>142</sup>
